The Dayton Visual Arts Center (DVAC)

is a resource for everyone who enjoys art. It's a place where artists and art collectors find each other. Stop in and check out what's being shown in our gallery on North Jefferson, between First and Second streets in downtown Dayton. While you're visiting, ask about upcoming parties in the Artist Palate series and what kinds of workshops, get-togethers, field trips and forums are coming up.

DVAC mounts 12 to 18 exhibits each year, showing art that is being made here and now, expressing ideas about our environment and society. A 501 (c) 3 nonprofit organization that supports working artists, DVAC also provides educational programs and activities for anyone who has an interest in the visual arts, whether they create it or not.

Join the Dayton Visual Arts Center to learn more about making and collecting art; meet artists and art supporters; and find beautiful, original objects to fill your heart as well as your walls.

The 14th Annual Art Auction, held the last Friday in April, is a spirited evening of bidding for fine art donated in support of DVAC's mission. Food, drink and music add to the exciting atmosphere.

Artist Palate parties are held in artists' studios and collectors' homes. These gatherings of eclectic people highlight the ways people incorporate art into their living and working spaces.

ARTtoBUY brings together original art and fine craft from member artists. Occupying a portion of the gallery, ARTtoBUY is a great place to find unique gifts from Thanksgiving through graduation and wedding season.

Art Source gives you access to every kind of original art you can imagine by hundreds of Dayton-area artists. Whether you are outfitting a building or finishing a room, we can help you find, frame and install the perfect pieces.

More about DVAC

16 years old on June 1, 2007

Located in the Biltmore on Main Street until 1993; on West Fourth Street 1994-2005; moved to Jefferson Street January, 2006

An active, diverse membership of 800

About 550 of the 800 are artists; others are art collectors, arts administrators, educators, community advocates – those who know how art adds color to our lives, tells our stories and brings us together

What you will see in the gallery

Solo, two-person and group exhibitions proposed by artists and curators, reviewed biennially by a jury of art professionals from outside the Dayton area; themed exhibits and invitationals and short shows (brief exhibitions chosen by members of the exhibition & programming committee) that bring our members' work to light; and handmade objects in the ever-changing ARTtoBUY Gift Gallery

Other things you will find at DVAC

Art talks and tours for school and community groups; gallery talks with exhibiting artists; adult and family art-making programs; art-related activities at public events; visual art displays in off-site locations; a resource for finding visual art teachers; professional development programs for visual artists; a stop during downtown art hops; and a starting place for
